NOVEL METHOD

Of Dealing With the Whisky Traffic
—The Drinker is Licensed

In Oregon they are going after the whisky traffic in a novel way. They have reversed the order of things.

Instead of licensing the seller, the buyer of strong drink is compelled to take out a license for which he has to pay $5 for every six months.

Saloons must be compelled by law to confine their sales exclusively to persons holding licenses to buy, under pain of a heavy fine, for selling to unauthorized drinkers.

A feature of the law is that every six months
a complete list of the licensed drinkers is published.

Colonel John L. Shaff of Cincinnati passed through the city Saturday en route to Maysville where he dined with Dr. Davis. Mr. and Mrs. Shaff are just home from an extended European trip and while abroad they jostled elbows with potentates, crown princes and folks gentle in general. The Colonel is a most interesting and entertaining and elegant gentleman. In consequence of his attractive and genial personality his friends are as numberless as sands on the seashore. Mr. Shaff's name is prominently mentioned in connection with the Democratic nomination for Mayor of the Queen
City and should the plum fall in his lap his

WHAT HENRY WATTERSON would call the "divine infusion of the gods," has advanced in price as the rate of 2 cents a gallon.—Toledo Blade.

With all the investigating it has never yet been clearly settled whether or not JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER's father is living. Johndee must be ashamed of the old man.

THE Pennsylvania League of Republican Clubs has indorsed her favorite son, Senator PHILANDER C. KNOX, for President. We'll wager that PHILANDER himself don't take his Presidential boom seriously.

ILLINOIS Central surplus, after charges for fiscal year ended June 30th, $11,687,091, equal to 12.29% on capital stock and an increase of $824,752 over previous year. And yet the I. C. is registering a howl over the new 2-cent law.

WHEN the Secretary of War, Mr. TAFT, a Presidential probability, came to his own state of Ohio and advised the Republicans to vote the Democratic ticket, to correct the evils of dishonest machine government, we commended and applauded his courage and patriotism, but when a much worse state of affairs exists in Kentucky, and one Democrat advises another to vote the Republican ticket, or votes it himself, the machine Democrats call it treason. But patriotism should mean the same thing on both sides of the river. (Applause.)—Hon. John E. Garner at Winchester.

THE WASHINGTON THEATER.

F. G. Conrad presents the latest successful melodrama,

"A DANGEROUS FRIEND!"

In tone. Strong in action. Faultlessly staged. Splendidly acted.

PRICES 25c, 35c and 50c.

"FLOATING bonds" and "watered stock" are rather vague and intangible terms for gilt-edged securities. Yet the world's greatest enterprises have been built upon such aqueous foundations.

Down in Cuba nothing less than the rank of General goes, and some of the Generals are pretty rank, too. In Old Kentucky nearly every man is a Colonel, and many of them are also cheap skates.

A SUB-COMMITTEE of the Committee on Appropriations of the next Congress will go to the isthmus in November to investigate Secretary TAFT's canal estimates for 1909; if present plans are carried out.

THEY are now talking of erecting a building 150 stories high in New York City. Where is this skyscraping craze going to end, anyway? The tallest structure in the world is the 50-story Singer Building, 742 feet high. A building 150 stories high would, therefore, reach over 2,200 feet in the air, or nearly a half mile.

A LOVE STORY.

"I have something to say to you, Amanda." The speaker was a handsome youth of some twenty Falls.
"Spiel," said the lovely girl by his side.
"Will you be mine?"
"Why should I be yours?" retorted the girl. Claude Phosphate pondered.
"I don't know," he finally replied.
"Neither do I," said Amanda.
Isn't that reason enough?" asked Claude.
"Sure!"
"Then you will be mine?"
"Well, I guess so."
"Then you are false—false to the traditions of the Summer girl."
"Naughty Claude, to say such things about your Amanda."
"Then you will?"
"Sure, I was only kidding you."

REDUCED PRICES ON ALL Spring and Summer SHOES

There are no better Shoes on the market than the Shoes we sell. Our prices are right and the goods are worth the price.

J. H. PECOR'S,
SECOND STREET.

She left him at the table to return in a moment with a slight young girl.

"You see," she exclaimed in a whisper, "Bessie isn't any heavyweight, but she can make splendid pies. I told 'em it was shame to let a pie like that go for half a dollar, so I put my name under it so the fund wouldn't be cheated."

"No danger of that," he said, with a smile, "with you on the lookout. I think your business ability is wasted in so small a sphere. Properly placed you could become a Napoleon of finance."

"They go to jail in the long run," she replied, pleased, nevertheless, at the compliment. "Bessie'll take care, you all right."

Bessie Roblee lacked Mrs. Marlowe's confidence of manner, but Libby quickly put her at her ease and she found her shyness indescribably attractive. Long before the pie was finished, he had fallen captive, and he manfully ate part of a second after finding out which was hers.

Even when he had to pay toll on Mrs. Marlowe's weight a second time he did not complain. The pie—and its accompaniment—was well worth the price.

He did not realize it, but he had been lonesome and homesick. He had missed the life of the city, and he was miserable. Now a slip of a girl had wrought a marvelous change, and as he blew out the light he smiled at himself in the glass.

The social was such a success that it was repeated in the spring, and again Mrs. Marlowe stood proxy for her more slender sisters.

Bert was one of the first to appear, and he had no difficulty in selecting Bessie's pies. In the interval he had partaken of many, for Mrs. Roblee had made him welcome at her home, and it was a polite fiction that he came to eat pie.

He was finishing off his second. "I wish I could get other things as easily," he said, as he laid down his fork. "Hearts, for instance."

"They come by weight," she said, softly. "The weight of a man's worth, only it is he who is weighed in the balance."

"I wish I could get Mrs. Marlowe for a proxy," he regretted half humorously, half wistfully.

"Do you need her?" she asked. "It is not bulk, but worth."

"And you think I would weigh up well?" he asked.

Bessie nodded. His hand clasped hers beneath the table.

"Then weigh me in the balance of your love," he pleaded.

"You are not found wanting," she whispered. "I think you weigh—much more than Mrs. Marlowe," she added, softly.

The United States has the largest foreign population. Argentina, where 12 out of every hundred are foreigners, ranks second.

Work Done When Promised.

WEIGHTS AND WIVES

By IRWIN JOHNSON

"Won't you come over to the church to-night?" asked Mr. Griffith, the minister, as he stopped the new superintendent of the mills for a chat.

"The ladies have a new idea. I'm not exactly clear as to the details, but it promises to be amusing."

"I'll try," agreed Libby, though he made the mental reservation that he was certain to have important work on hand.

But after supper he felt the call of the paper before him, and in the end he put them away and went over to the bureau for a fresh collar.

Ten minutes later he was struggling into his coat and inquiring the way to the church. Mr. Griffith's welcome was alone worth the trip, and it was with a glow of satisfaction that he entered the Sunday school room and looked about him.

At one side, on a long table, were piles of all sorts, sizes and degrees of appeal. Mrs. Griffith came forward to take him in charge and led him up to the table.

"Now you just pick out the pie you want," she urged. "Then we'll tell you the rest."

"Don't I have to be weighed first?" he asked with a smile as he indicated the scales at one end of the table. She shook her head with dancing eyes.

"You just pick out your pie," she commanded.

In the midst of such plenty it was no easy matter, but at last he settled upon a particularly crusty mince pie. Mrs. Griffith lifted up the plate, looked at the card beneath and began to laugh.

"You've got, Mrs. Marlowe's pie," she announced. "You see you pay half a cent a pound on the weight of the maker; then she keeps you company while you eat the pie. Mrs. Marlowe!"

There was a shout of laughter as she called the name. Mrs. Marlowe came forward, a jolly-faced woman of exceeding stoutness.

She clambered upon the scales and Libby duly deposited $1.10. Then, with a bow to Mrs. Marlowe, he offered his arm.

It was rather more than he had bargained for, but he was game, and as they sought a table he smiled back into the faces of those who laughed at the way he had been caught.

"I've got more pies up the," announced Mrs. Marlowe. "I'm making more money for the organ fund than three of those skinny girls. I want to watch the pies. I'll send you a substitute."

Hospital Notes

The work on the Market Street sewer, which now begins, makes it necessary to return to that interesting subject, the Hospital, even at the risk of repeating things we have already said.

When will the Hospital be completed? Just as soon as the plumbing arrangements will allow the water to be turned on. With the opening of the large two-foot sewer which the city now has in hand, these arrangements will be made, and the wards prepared for the reception of patients.

As to physicians: The town is full of reputable doctors and there is ample room for choice, with the privilege of frequent changes, if desired, and the introduction of surgeons or physicians from Cincinnati, if the local material should seem a little "short."

The "foreign" doctors will find everything to their taste, and the "operating" room, especially, will be found quite equal to anything they have at home. The water will be good; the air unquestionably better, and the staff of nurses probably no worse.

The Hospital Staff will be composed of the most vigorous, active and capable physicians in the place—ready and eager for service eight or day; and if they should need to be reinforced by the "family physician," the latch string is always out to him.

Everything will be wide open from start to finish—especially for contributions to the Hospital exchequer.

Ever have itching piles? Not sick enough to go to bed; not well enough to be content. The constant itching sensation. Spoils your temper, yearly drives you crazy. You can have relief and cure if you will follow the advice of a local citizen.

Mrs. S. F. Tolles, of 117 Short street, Maysville, Ky., says:

"Before I used Doan's Ointment, in March, 1900, I had suffered for a long while with itching hemorrhoids. I had tried persistently to rid myself of the trouble but without success, and anybody who has known the tortures of this complaint will understand what I suffered. Doan's Ointment cured me, as stated in a testimonial given at that time. During the five years past I have had no return of the trouble. It required only one box to bring this gratifying result. I have used Doan's Ointment for other purposes and find that it is a specific for skin troubles
